Body

BRET BAIER, FOX NEWS HOST: We'll give you a preview of that and all the news. We fit in a lot tonight. Thanks for inviting us into your home tonight. That's it for this "SPECIAL REPORT". Fair, balanced and still unafraid. JESSE WATTERS PRIMETIME is right now. Hey Jesse.

JESSE WATTERS, FOX NEWS HOST: Hey, you do fit in a lot. People always say that about you. Joe Biden has seen more seasons than a lot of us. He knows that it gets cold in January and hot in July. In the winter, he throws on a warm jacket. And in the summer, he licks a cold cone of ice cream. But on a really hot day, he might even jump in the neighborhood pool.

(BEGIN VIDEO CLIP)

JOE BIDEN (D), PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES: You know, I sit on the stand and it get hot. I got lot of - I got hairy legs that turn - that turn blonde in the sun. And the kid used to come up and reach in the pool and rub my leg down. So, it was (inaudible) watch the hair come back up again. I used to go into key room at lunchtime after free swim and sit on the floor, because it was nice and cool.

(END VIDEO CLIP)

WATTERS: Joe had a pretty good understanding about how to handle a hot summer. Biden was never concerned about global warming. He was Delaware senator for four decades. A state run by Corporate America, not by Joe Biden.

Delaware doesn't have a single offshore wind turbine and gets over 90 percent of their energy from natural gas. Joe hasn't installed a single solar panel on either of his homes, and he definitely, definitely doesn't drive an electric car.

(BEGIN VIDEO CLIP)

UNIDENTIFIED MALE: Sounds good. Try your brakes.

UNIDENTIFIED MALE: They're good.

(END VIDEO CLIP)

WATTERS: And Joe's family isn't green either. Hunter and Jimmy the Chin were making money from oil and gas over in Ukraine and China. It wasn't solar panel money they were making, the 10 they were holding for the Big Guy, that was made by fossil fuels. But as we told you last night, Joe isn't a smart man and doesn't have a mind of his own. The president does whatever is popular in his party at the moment in order to stop the party from totally abandoning him. Joe may now be declaring a national climate emergency, not because he wants to, or thinks we need to, but because the Democrats are making him.

(BEGIN VIDEO CLIP)

UNIDENTIFIED FEMALE: President Biden has been so delayed in terms of moving forward on the executive actions that we desperately need him to be doing on climate change.

SEN. DICK DURBIN (D-IL): Climate change is real. We can see it in the extreme weather that's taking place all over the globe. I think the global situation is an emergency. And if we're not serious about it in this generation, our kids will pay a heavy, heavy price.

UNIDENTIFIED MALE: We will be condemned and cursed by future generation for our stupidity in not addressing climate change.

(END VIDEO CLIP)

WATTERS: Manchin killed Biden's Green New Deal, which he actually plagiarized from Bernie, because it was going to increase inflation. Thankfully, Joe Manchin is the only Democrat in the Senate with any common sense. So, Biden's being forced to do the walk of shame and push the Green New Deal through an executive order.

So, the White House scrambled and rushed Joe Biden to Massachusetts, where he pulled up in what looked like where the mob dumps bodies. I don't know if that's a landfill or just one of those racist roads that Mayor Pete keeps talking about. But that's where the White House decided to make the president give a speech on going green. That's the place. I'm not sure a giant fleet of gas guzzling SUVs was the right move. But again, Biden isn't allowed to ride a bike anywhere anymore. And he got out of the motorcade and he declared Code Red.

(BEGIN VIDEO CLIP)

BIDEN: I have a responsibility to act with urgency and resolve when our nation faces clear and present danger. And that's what climate change is about. It is literally not figuratively a clear and present danger. The health of our citizens and our communities is literally at stake. U.S. lead international climate scientists called the latest climate report, nothing less than, Code Red for humanity. We say it again, Code Red for humanity.

(END VIDEO CLIP)

WATTERS: Have you ever seen the president with that kind of sense of urgency before? I mean, there's a clear and present danger on our crime ridden street corners, at the gas station or at the border. But Biden is worried about what the weather is going to be looking like next century. And what's his answer? Windmills, lots and lots of windmills. It looks like he's standing in a Ukrainian war zone. But that site is actually used to be a coal plant.

Democrats came in and shut the coal plant down and fired 200 Massachusetts workers though, but now they want to make windmills there. Look at that site right now. How soon do you think they're going to start churning out said windmills? I mean I'm for clean energy and if wind is going to do it, fine. But there's a catch.

The company that's going to be making those windmills at that place is owned by the Italians, not the Italians from Boston, Italians from Italy. So, Joe's not even handing out corporate welfare to us. You think the company can stay above water, is this thing just going to be another Solyndra?

(BEGIN VIDEO CLIP)

BIDEN: We're journeying in a sense closer and closer to the sun to a more solar powered America. And as we do, we're leaving a shadow of a less efficient, more damaging past behind us. And I'm really happy along with the secretary to announce today that we've closed a $535 million loan guarantee for Solyndra.

(END VIDEO CLIP)

WATTERS: And shortly after Biden and Obama handed over your cash to Solyndra, they went under, no solar panels, no refunds, poof, half a billion gone. But the Democrat donors were first in line to recoup the money. You would think Joe might have learned his lesson by now, but it's hot in England. So, Joe says this is a crisis in America, and he's going to bypass Congress to regulate and spent,

(BEGIN VIDEO CLIP)

BIDEN: Let me be clear, climate change is an emergency. And in the coming weeks, I'm going to use the power I have as president to turn these words in a formal official government actions through the appropriate proclamations, executive orders, and regulatory power that a president possess. When it comes to fighting climate change, climate change, I will not take no for an answer.

(END VIDEO CLIP)

WATTERS: As we told you Joe's never cared about climate change. This is Bernie's plan. And why hasn't Massachusetts gone green already? Aren't they run by a bunch of liberal Democrats? The state of Massachusetts, you ready, gets less than 1 percent of its energy from renewables. The rest of its natural gas, nuclear and coal. So, what's been stopping Massachusetts for the last decade for going green? Well, pretty much everything. You cannot power the state with windmills, it just doesn't work. Solar panels work where it's hot and flat in the southwest. Hydro works where there's a lot of water, like in the northwest and windmills work where it's flat, wide, open and windy.

And by the way, it takes hundreds of thousands of gallons of oil to maintain the windmills. This economy can't survive on green energy alone. Electric cars are expensive, and there aren't enough charging stations. And if you can find the plug, you'd probably be waiting in line for quite some time.

In Texas, they told Tesla drivers to avoid charging their cars because they were overloading the power grid. Green technology is just not ready for PRIMETIME. But Mayor Pete says they're going to try to force it through anyway. Because this is what the transition looks like.

(BEGIN VIDEO CLIP)

UNIDENTIFIED MALE: When wind and solar won't power the homes in Europe. How do we not use hydrocarbons to make sure that near term these people aren't either freezing or dying from the heat. So, how do you declare a climate crisis in the middle of an actual weather crisis.

PETE BUTTIGIEG, TRANSPORTATION SECRETARY: This is what a transition looks like, right? This is exactly the challenge that we're living through. You can't flip a switch; you can't do it overnight. There's a clear understanding that when it comes to the climate, we're running out of time.

UNIDENTIFIED MALE: We're going to be able to change the weather between - or the climate between now and 2030. With what--

BUTTIGIEG: We've changed the climate between 20 - we changed the climate between 2010 and now and not in a good way.

(END VIDEO CLIP)

WATTERS: If Joe thinks this is going to win him voters, he's dumber than we thought. There's a reason America rejected Bernie, twice. Only 1 percent of people say global warming is a concern, 1 percent. Certain parts of the world will get a tiny bit warmer, but the United States will be just fine. We're getting a lot of the boy who cried wolf vibes now.

In 1971, experts told The Washington Post that a new ice age would be here the next 50 years. Well, it's 51 years later and it's hot and sunny here in New York. In 1989, the UN warned that rising seas would obliterate nations if global warming wasn't reversed by the year 2000. Has Japan gone underwater like Atlantis? No. And in 2004, the Pentagon told Bush that climate change is a bigger threat than terrorism. And Britain would feel like Siberia by 2020. Got it.

And if any of this was as dire as it sounded, climate czar John Kerry wouldn't be flying all around the globe in his flying squirrel, the private jet that is admitted over 300 metric tons of carbon since Biden appointed him. That's 20 times more than what you and I produce in just two years. But when you're a snob and think you're better than everybody, you can do whatever you want

(BEGIN VIDEO CLIP)

JOHN KERRY, CLIMATE CZAR: It's the only choice for somebody like me who is traveling the world to win this battle. I believe the time it takes me to get somewhere, I can't sail across the ocean, I have to fly, to meet with people and get things done.

(END VIDEO CLIP)

WATTERS: The Europeans went green and became dependent on Russia. Look what happened there. Biden's trying to go green and make us dependent on China and Saudi Arabia. What do you think is going to happen there? Is anybody paying attention yet? The Democrats are either dumb, or they're just trying to destroy the country. We report, you decide.

Larry Kudlow is the host of Kudlow on Fox Business. Larry, if you ask Joe Biden, to simply explain how global warming occurs, do you think he'd be even able to do that?

LARRY KUDLOW, HOST, KUDLOW ON FBN: Well, I don't think - it was a good opening, Jesse. Look, at the very least, I'm going to give him the benefit of this doubt. I don't think he understands the difference between climate problem and a weather problem. OK. Climate issues run a 100 year cycles, like one degree Celsius increase in climate since the end of the 19th century, OK. And there's nothing that's going to happen in the next five years or 10 years. Despite all their obsessive radical climate activism and so forth, nothing's going to happen. That's going to change these long run trends, which are fine. I might add, America leads the way in clean air and clean water.

We've had the biggest reductions of carbon emissions, this is largely because of the natural gas, fracking revolution and so forth. I mean, it's just so much hype and blather and blarney. I mean, look, it's very warm this week in New York City. OK, but that doesn't mean that we should give the president all kinds of emergency powers that would violate the constitution, and also would not be under statute from the Congress.

So, I don't think he has a leg to stand on. And I think you're probably right, he's just blathering on to assuage the Far Left of his own party. And by the by, that Monmouth poll you cited is so important, climate change, top issue, 1 percent of the people polled say that climate change is the top issue, whereas 35 percent or so say inflation, 8 percent or 9 percent or 10 percent say economy, can't afford daily living and so forth and so on. Those are the issues. Inflation, economy, recession, it's not climate change. People are furious at the explosion of energy costs, which by the way appears to be pushing us into recession.

WATTERS: All right, Larry Kudlow, see him over there on Fox Business, the best in the business. They call him Larry. Thank you so much for joining us tonight on PRIMETIME.

KUDLOW: Thanks, Jesse.

WATTERS: Breaking news in the Hunter Biden investigation ahead.

WATTERS: Over here at PRIMETIME we've been searching for the right word to call the dumpster fire at our southern border. But Biden's Press Secretary may have just given us the best term yet

(BEGIN VIDEO CLIP)

KARINE JEAN-PIERRE, WHITE HOUSE PRESS SECRETARY: Migrants being shipped to other states. And we believe it's shameful that some governors are using migrants as a political tool, as a political play. I think it's shameful that that is happening.

(END VIDEO CLIP)

WATTERS: Shameful. Exactly. But it's the White House who should be ashamed. Migrants are pouring over the border in record numbers and Texas doesn't have the room or the resources. So, they're busing them up to Washington DC, which is making the mayor of DC Muriel Bowser very angry.

(BEGIN VIDEO CLIP)

MURIEL BOWSER, MAYOR OF DC: We for sure called on the federal government to work across state lines to prevent people from really being tricked into getting on buses. But I fear that they're being tricked into nationwide bus trips when their final destinations are places all over the United States of America.

(END VIDEO CLIP)

WATTERS: Yes, I mean, no one would go to DC without being tricked. But she's not the only Democrat making noise. New York City Mayor Eric Adams, he's also fed up.

(BEGIN VIDEO CLIP)

ERIC ADAMS, NEW YORK CITY MAYOR: We need not only federal government, but we need some of those states that have been given people one way tickets, we need them to understand that this must be a partnership in this country to deal with those who are coming here seeking refuge or asylum.

This is a real burden on New Yorkers as we're trying to do the right thing. We already as I stated, we already have an overburdened shelter system. So, now we're talking about as you stated food, clothing, school. This is going to impact our schools.

(END VIDEO CLIP)

WATTERS: I didn't know masks were back here. That's a new thing. But Adams is angry at the wrong guy. Texas hasn't bust anybody to the Big Apple. Biden's the one who has been flying migrants to New York. And he's been doing it in the middle of the night.

(BEGIN VIDEO CLIP)

PETER DOOCY, FOX NEWS CORRESPONDENT: Why is the administration flying thousands of migrants from the border to Florida and New York in the middle of the night?

JEN PSAKI, FORMER WHITE HOUSE PRESS SECRETARY: Well, I'm not sure that's in the middle of the night. But let me tell you what's happening here.

DOOCY: 2:30 AM, 4:29 AM, very early in the morning.

PSAKI: Here we are talking about early flights, earlier than you might like to take a flight.

(END VIDEO CLIP)

WATTERS: It's not like these illegals are going to get sent to New York and wander up to Connecticut. I mean, there's nothing to do in Connecticut. And why is it OK for the federal government to let illegal swarm into Texas, but not OK for them to swarm into New York or DC. These idiotic Democrat politicians on the East Coast don't even realize it. But they're making the same point the border state politicians have made for two years, which is, do your job, Joe Biden, because we can't handle the flow. But if you ask the Biden administration, the border is secure.

(BEGIN VIDEO CLIP)

ALEJANDRO MAYORKAS, DHS SECRETARY: The border is secure. At the border, we are working to make the border more secure. That has been a historic challenge.

(END VIDEO CLIP)

WATTERS: Historic challenge. Sounds like a phrase at the White House spent 50 grand focus grouping. Clay Travis is the founder of Outkick and the host of the Clay Travis and Buck Sexton Show. These Democrats, they must be racist, Clay, they don't like all these illegals pouring into their city. What are we going to do with them?

CLAY TRAVIS, FOUNDER OF OUTKICK: The racism, frankly, that I saw from Muriel Bowser and Eric Adams. I mean, I found that jaw dropping. I didn't know that White Supremacy has spread to Washington, DC and to New York City so quickly. They might be as the New York Times memorably referred to Larry Elder that might be the black face of White Supremacy that you just aired, Jesse Watters. I mean, frankly, it was appalling.

But look, the reality here is exactly what you said. Small towns all along the Texas border and Arizona have been dealing with this for years. And suddenly New York and DC get a tiny fraction of the overwhelming nature that they have. Because remember, we're talking about tens of thousands of people coming across into small towns, not big cities like New York and Washington, DC that have massive resources to deal with substantial populations.

We're talking about some of these migrant trains, these illegal immigrants coming across that are nearly overwhelming the populations of these towns themselves doubling overnight, like we saw down in Del Rio, Texas and beyond when all these caravans came through. And what I find still remarkable, remarkable, Jesse, is that Joe Biden has spent more at the Ukrainian border, traveling to observe thing. And he has the actual United border, which he still has not visited during either his campaign, which he ran from the Delaware basement or from his presidency, and he's flying after that stupid address he did today back to the beach already after not having anything on the schedule for the past couple of days. What a sham, this entire thing.

WATTERS: Clay, are you telling me that the president took off Monday, he took off Tuesday, and tomorrow Thursday, he's flying back to Delaware for another three day weekend. Is that what you're telling me? But there's a climate emergency--

TRAVIS: I literally as I was waiting for you, Miranda Devine tweeted out that his schedule is now out. He's headed to the beach. He will be there from Thursday, all the way until Monday according to this tweet of the White House schedule. He had one public availability Jesse on Wednesday went up had that awful speech where he talked about the fact that he got cancer from having to use - the oil or whatever on his on his front windshield. And that's it. That's all he's going to do. And now he's headed to the beach in Delaware,

WATTERS: All right. It's a big week. That beach in Delaware must be beautiful, because that's where he always is. Clay Travis.

TRAVIS: Hey, you know what this is, Jesse. You'll remember the movie. It's Weekend at Bernie's 1 that we're living through right now. And they're threatening to carry us on to Weekend at Bernie's 2, that's the Biden administration.

WATTERS: It sure is. All right, Clay. Thanks as always.

TRAVIS: Appreciate it.

WATTERS: Fox News Alert, sources tell Fox that the federal probe into Hunter Biden's business dealings is nearing a critical juncture. Investigators are now reportedly weighing whether they should charge the president's son with tax fraud, foreign lobbying violations and lying on a firearms background check. But there's now concern from the Department of Justice about the timing of the charges.

According to CNN, Merrick Garland, Joe Biden's Attorney General is worried about bringing charges against Hunter so close to the midterms. Wait a second. I didn't realize Joe Biden was on the ballot this November.

CNN is also reporting that federal investigators have examined Hunter's business activities overseas during Joe Biden's presidency, and whether Hunter violated money laundering and campaign finance laws as well. The U.S. Attorney in Delaware, his name is David Weiss. He's a Donald Trump appointee. And he stayed on to continue the Hunter Biden investigation but looks like he's butting heads with Joe Biden's Justice Department as he appears ready to charge the president son.

Let's bring in former Department of Justice prosecutor Jim Trusty. Jim, do you see a big conflict here that the Delaware U.S. attorney is ready to charge? But Maine justice Merrick Garland says ho, ho, ho, we don't want to make this too political before the midterms?

JIM TRUSTY, FORMER DOJ PROSECUTOR: Well, maybe I actually think there might be more collusion at work than you're giving credit for. I'm really concerned about the story that came out because it is a lowball treatment of Hunter Biden, 80 percent or 90 percent of federal white collar cases, Jesse, include the word conspiracy. We're now reduced to hearing about a tax case and a rinky dink gun case, which means by definition, one person they're talking about, I think, coming up with the right timing for a soft plea for Hunter Biden to have very little consequences.

And the other part of the story that I thought was very disturbing, very interesting, is they quote or they say at least that federal officials were really fretting over whether his drug addiction was a defense in these cases. Well, drug addiction might factor in when you're in a barroom brawl, right? Whether you have an intent to kill in that knife fight, but for economic crimes, are you talking about complex economic crimes spanning months or years? It's ludicrous, it's mitigation, maybe but it would never be a defense.

So, I think we're hearing the beginning of a story of a poor drug addicted man who's going to get very special treatment with a Friday evening play to tax charge and maybe this 18 USC 922 firearm in the hands of someone with a drug addiction kind of built in mitigation to how they're going to package that and it cuts a - what it looks to be a pay for play scheme. Completely into a tiny little silo Hunter Biden if that's where they're going to go.

WATTERS: It looks like a mop up job again, whether it's the Clinton's, the Biden's never get touched. What happens when you're a Democrat? All right, Jim, thank you very much. We hope you're well, but thank you.

TRUSTY All right, Jesse. Me too.

WATTERS: Late Night has started going after Joe Biden. What does this mean? We'll tell you.

(BEGIN VIDEO CLIP)

UNIDENTIFIED MALE: Anyone do the number thing, number one, the one part, number two what the guy said, number three, you know the drill. Come on.

(END VIDEO CLIP)

WATTERS: Just when you thought things couldn't get any worse for Joe Biden, a poll came out today that puts the president at just 31 percent approval. That's lower than Donald Trump's approval rating after January 6th. It's that low.

I have never ever seen a presidential approval rating this low in any poll for any president that I have covered in my long and illustrious career.

So, with news that bad it's no surprise that the White House is looking to shake up its communications team. They think they're doing a fantastic job it's just that people don't know it. But really, we are just laughing at them. My dad always told me, know when people are laughing with you and recognize when they are laughing at you. Because no one wants to be the butt of the joke.

But that's where Joe Biden finds himself even his buddies in Late Night are now roasting him. Dana Carvey had quite the impression of old Joe.

(BEGIN VIDEO CLIP)

DANA CARVEY, COMEDIAN: He is always repeating the story. Yes. I went to Scran -- Scranton, I grew up in Scranton, Pennsylvania. And when he does the number thing. Number one, the one part. Number two, what the guy said, number three, you know the drill. Come on. No, we don't. That's -- now, what he does is he kind of whispers and then he yells.

We know how to get natural gas. Because we can get it. We know how to get it. That's what we do. Because the people at -- public private -- the pirates of the Caribbean.

(END VIDEO CLIP)

WATTERS: And it only got worse from there. Just listen to what Late Night had to say about the fist bump seen around the world.

(BEGIN VIDEO CLIP)

STEPHEN COLBERT, COMEDIAN: This was always going to be a touchy trip because the crowned prince is infamously and I'm putting it delicately here, a murderer. OK. He gets out of the car, approaching Mr. Bone saw and, boom, go the ethics.

UNKNOWN: You know what Biden should have done if he didn't want any controversy in this he should have went in for the handshake and then give him the psych.

(APPLAUSE)

UNKNOWN: Just do that move. There's no come back from that. Devastating.

(END VIDEO CLIP)

WATTERS: Hopefully Joe is taking the hint. I'm sorry, but it's time to go. Even your friends don't want you at this party.

(BEGIN VIDEO CLIP)

JIMMY FALLON, COMEDIAN: I read that Dr. Fauci says he plans to retire by the end of President Biden's term. And everyone turned to Biden like, is there anything you would like to announce, too?

(END VIDEO CLIP)

WATTERS: Joining me now is Kayleigh McEnany, co-host of Outnumbered and former White House press secretary.

All right. So you were around when the Late Night people, not too nice to Donald Trump but so far they haven't laid a glove on Joe, what do you interpret this change meaning?

KAYLEIGH MCENANY, FOX NEWS CO-HOST: They don't want to go down with the Titanic. I mean, you mentioned the approval rating, 31 percent. This is Quinnipiac. OK. This is left wing. Do you believe Quinnipiac? Do you believe that Governor DeSantis is not the governor of Florida right now? It's a guy named Andrew Gillum who is leading DeSantis by like 10 points in this poll before election day in Florida.

This poll favors Democrats. And now it's at 31 percent for Joe, 19 percent among Latinos or I guess as Jill Biden would say tacos. And so, the Late Night show they are like, we don't want anything to do with this. Like, even we can't defend this guy. The press secretary can't. The Late Night guys can't come up with jokes to defend him.

WATTERS: Yes. He is bad for business pretty much everywhere in the media landscape. And the White House has a plan, Kayleigh, they think we are just not really understanding the genius of the Biden administration. They think they just need to change the messaging, and if they get the messaging right, then we'll all of a sudden have this epiphany and realize that Joe Biden is the greatest president of all time. Do you think this has a chance of working?

MCENANY: No. And this is the biggest joke to me. I mean, you always ask yourself as a press secretary do we have a messaging problem or a facts problem. Well, now you have got both. You have a president who is running the country into the ground further and further, deeper and deeper.

And you have a press secretary, I'm sorry to say it, who just isn't up for the job. I mean, she called Justice Clarence Thomas Judge Thompson. Not only that, you know, she is always saying I don't have anything for you on something like the baby formula crisis.

There are things when I went to the podium, I knew I needed an update on COVID-19, for example. Baby formula would be another in this case. And she flipped through binder for 45 seconds and didn't have an answer and said I have nothing for you.

So, they've got both. I mean, you've got a messaging problem. You've got a facts problem. Nothing is redeeming about this administration. I believe John Kirby is going to take that lectern at some point because it's getting pretty bad.

WATTERS: Yes. He probably needs a new binder, too. Because whatever they are reading from the binder is not working.

MCENANY: Yes.

WATTERS: Kayleigh is going to be this weekend at Turning Point USA's student action summit. We are going to stream it live on demand on Foxnation.com. See you there, Kayleigh.

Exclusive new footage of the Colbert nine capitol insurrection when we return.

WATTERS: We are learning horrifying new details tonight on last month's insurrection at the capitol after a group of staffers from the Late show with Stephen Colbert with arrested for trespassing on the capitol grounds.

Let's turn to Kevin Corke for the latest. Kevin?

Democrats Push Biden To Declare Climate Emergency; Manchin Kills Green Spending Deal; Biden Sounds The Alarm On Climate Change; Democrats Mayors Starting To Sou....

KEVIN CORKE, FOX NEWS WHITE HOUSE CORRESPONDENT: Good evening, Jesse. Some people spend a year and a half in solitary for being inside the capitol without permission. Others like staffers of the Colbert show walk free. And that is despite newly obtained security cam footage showing that group being disruptive.

Here after we will refer to them as the Colbert nine. They were seen on camera banging on the doors of Republican congressional offices yelling about a cocaine orgy and leaving something under a door. Now, capitol police say the ruckus got so bad that it scared a Democratic staffer who then called the cops, asked for help said he feared for his safety.

And to top it all off. When cops finally arrived, Colbert's nine refused to cooperate. And they lied about being credentialed staff. Cops then warned them to get out, leave, they refused. And got cuffed. Police say they are shocked that prosecutors are, quote, "dropping charges."

Here is part of a statement that reads this way. It is unfortunate that despite all the evidence the department presented, including that the group or its leader had been told several times that they could not be in the buildings without an escort, that the U.S. attorney's office declined to prosecute any members of the group for unlawful entry.

Now, prosecutors claim they just don't think they have the goods. Didn't think they could get a conviction in court and that's why they dropped the charges. Unequal justice? We report. You decide.

WATTERS: So, they were yelling about a cocaine orgy and no congressman jumped out of their office and ran towards -- OK. I'm just surprised that's all.

CORKE: I will have to check on that. Yes.

WATTERS: All right. Kevin, thank you so much.

CORKE: You bet.

WATTERS: A big win for the Pelosi household today after the Senate passed a $52 billion with a b dollar, semiconductor bill to boost chip production. Nancy is already telling her friends that once her bill hits the back floor, she is backing it. So, you can expect it to be a slam dunk.

But why is Nancy so excited about a chip bill? Well, Papa P. fresh off buying 20,000 shares in a chip company called Nvidia. Putting $5 million on the line banking that it would skyrocket. And just like magic, the stock is already up 16 percent just in the last five days.

It's almost as if Papa Paulie P. saw the bill coming. How odd. But fancy Nancy says there's nothing to see here. Her office telling us, quote, "the speaker does not own any stocks. The speaker has no prior knowledge or subsequent involvement in any transactions."

One problem with that statement, California is a community property state, which means spouses split assets 50/50. So, when Paulie P. slings a couple stocks, Nancy automatically gets 50 percent of the action. This looks so bad even the lefties on CNBC don't like it. Watch.

(BEGIN VIDEO CLIP)

ANDREW ROSS SORKIN, CO-ANCHOR, CNBC: Someone said to me, you know, why hasn't Congress moved on this and then I say why hasn't Congress moved on it look who is in charge of the House. Doesn't it just undermine the credibility of Congress and our elected officials? To think that Nancy Pelosi should be recuse herself completely from negotiating, voting on and participating in any conversation around the CHIPS Act.

(END VIDEO CLIP)

WATTERS: Hey, that's a good question. Let's ask criminal defense attorney Brian Claypool. All right. What have you got, Brian?

BRIAN CLAYPOOL, CRIMINAL DEFENSE ATTORNEY: Hey, Jesse, great to be back with you. Let me get this straight, Nancy is the Speaker of the House, right? So, we think she is a pretty intelligent woman. And she is telling you that she has no ownership in any stock? Really? I mean, that is flat out fiction.

And we know that she knows that she owns 50 percent of everything that Paul Pelosi gets. So that's a bunch of garbage for her to try to tell the public, I don't have any -- and she also said, by the way, Jesse, I don't talk to Paul about that. Right? Would you believe that? Right?

We don't talk about that, but remember, you had me on about this arrest -- Paul Pelosi got arrested for DUI and, wait a minute, she was talking really fast about that. She talks to Paul about that. She called up the P.R. firm. She called up the criminal defense lawyer. It's ridiculous.

The optics here are horrible, Jesse. And here's why. Because if there is evidence that Paul Pelosi gained confidential information, that would be that there is a bill in the works, 50, what, $52 billion to help this semiconductor company Nvidia that he invested in?

If he had information about that and it wasn't available to the public, which we don't think it was to the general public, then, at minimum, there should be an investigation, a potential insider trading. So where is the congressional oversight and reform committee?

Carolyn Maloney is the head of that, let's contact her and find out whether there is going to be an investigation.

WATTERS: Yes.

CLAYPOOL: How about the DOJ? Are they going to look into this?

WATTERS: The DOJ they are going to look into it right after they get through with the Hunter Biden investigation. I'm sure they are going to be right on it, Brian. Right on it.

CLAYPOOL: Yes. Yes.

WATTERS: All right. Thank you so much. We will be reaching out to Representative Maloney very soon. Thanks as always.

Up next, we've bad dates, private jets, and dad and bods on the beach. Plus, I'm reading some of your texts.

WATTERS: Graphic. Wednesday, Watters' coolers, you guys like that graphic, we've been working for ages on that.

Joining me today, Fox Business correspondent Madison Alworth. All right, Madison, first up, dating can be expensive. But sometimes not going on a date can cost you even more.

A Michigan woman took a man to court after he stood her up for dinner. She sued the dude for 10 G's, citing emotional damages, and when the judge threw her case, she let him have it.

(BEGIN VIDEO CLIP)

UNKNOWN: To be honest with you, sir, I thought this was going to be thrown out. It was, we had a date, one date and nothing else after that. And now I'm being sued for $10,000. there was -- I don't really see how this is going to go any further. I think it's a waste of your time.

UNKNOWN: No, no, you don't understand, man. You don't understand --

(CROSSTALK)

UNKNOWN: Are we done here? Are we done here?

UNKNOWN: Perjury. Perjury.

UNKNOWN: Are we done here?

(END VIDEO CLIP)

WATTERS: Now, Madison, when a guy has a Polo short -- shirt with a horse, and jockey that is that big, you know he has a lot of dough.

MADISON ALWORTH, FOX BUSINESS NETWORK CORRESPONDENT: Yes, right.

WATTERS: So, you got to sue him for 10 grand right there.

ALWORTH: I mean, he must have worn something like that on the one date that they went on, because that's all they did. So, she was like going after the money, look at that that polo shirt. You know the thing is, this isn't her first frivolous lawsuit.

WATTERS: Really?

ALWORTH: So, she's like a repeat offender, if you will. And I think her philosophy, you know, you got to date a lot, right, to find the right guy.

WATTERS: Right.

ALWORTH: You've got to sue a lot to eventually win. But I don't know if this will really hold up in court. It definitely doesn't seem like it.

WATTERS: I don't think she is going to be going on any other dates because you basically have to marry the woman if you don't want to be sued.

All right, we have fathers who love to embarrass their kids, especially in public. These dads caught their daughters doing some beachside TikTok which is never allowed and they decided to get in on some of the fun. A little embarrassing, but I think that's what daughters deserve. They deserve that type of embarrassment when they are gyrating around like that with their phones on the beach.

ALWORTH: OK, so if your children did that with that, would that be your response?

WATTERS: Yes, I would look much better than that. But --

ALWORTH: I think he looks good.

WATTERS: You do?

ALWORTH: I think he is working in. I think he could find TikTok fame on his own.

WATTERS: Do you think he's working it.

ALWORTH: Yes. Look at him. He got the -- he just like claws at one point.

WATTERS: He does the claw?

ALWORTH: Yes. He, I think if this is --

(CROSSTALK)

WATTERS: And they are in anguish over there --

ALWORTH: The daughters are freaking out.

WATTERS: Right. They want to --

ALWORTH: They are so upset like.

WATTERS: -- dive in the ocean and just drown.

ALWORTH: But look, it's not funny, like they're willing to do it for the internet, but if like, dad does something, you're willing to do in the internet. But if dad does something in public on the beach, it's too much.

WATTERS: Dads are the worse. And for the father out there humiliating himself you are welcome on JESSE WATTERS PRIMETIME any time. We want to hear from you. You do have to wear a shirt on set, though.

Finally, (Inaudible) is not happy. If you thought John Kerry like flying private you should see what Kylie Jenner is up to. The bombshell billionaire flew her private jet, are you ready, for 12 minutes from Palm Springs airport to another private airstrip outside L.A. She could've just driven 39 minutes and avoided the plane altogether.

Does she even understand global warming or are we going to give her a pass?

ALWORTH: I don't. The internet is not giving her the pass. I think, you know, I don't think she understands it, or she doesn't care which shouldn't be surprising.

WATTERS: Who cares?

ALWORTH: The best, Jesse, is that following up to this, she then posted a photo a couple days later with her and her baby daddy asking like his or her jets, which one should we take. They both have private jets. So, it's just a flaunting thing. Like we shouldn't be surprised by this. Of course, she likes to fly private.

If I could fly private, I mean, I won't --

WATTERS: You do?

ALWORTH: -- but I'm also not turning around and then accusing everyone of like, you know.

WATTERS: You would do 12 minutes in the air?

ALWORTH: I don't know if I'd do 12 minutes.

WATTERS: All right. Did you just a baby daddy?

ALWORTH: I don't know what their status is, I don't follow Kylie that closely. I'm not sure if it's husband baby daddy --

WATTERS: OK, we don't say baby daddy on JESSE WATTERS PRIMETIME.

ALWORTH: I'm sorry.

WATTERS: Or at least I try not to.

ALWORTH: OK. Well, I said it.

WATTERS: You said it.

ALWORTH: I won't say it again. I won't say it again.

WATTERS: So, it's OK. Thank you very much, Madison.

All right. We got a window. I don't want to talk about it but I have to. I had a therapeutic massage today and it was very unique. Let me explain. A lymphatic drainage, I just found out about this. I got on the table and I laid on my back and the woman massaged my belly. I should say my stomach, but she massaged my stomach for 30 minutes and then she just did my legs. That was it.

She moved all these things around and she says I'm going to get skinnier over the next three days. She said drink a lot of water and try to eat clean. So, when I see you guys in three days, I better be really thin. It's called the tox, check it out. The tox. I guess it stands for detox.

Let's do some texts. Speaking of tox's. John from Wellsburg, West Virginia. Jess, what will the punishment be for the representatives who were arrested for public display of civil disobedience or will be charges be dropped?

There is no way that capitol police are going to be prosecuting AOC. All of those fake arrests, all those charges will be dropped.

Jeanie from Orlando, Florida. How much of an emergency is the climate emergency if you can delay declaring it? That's a very good point.

Nancy from P.A. Maybe we should bus the migrants to Rehoboth, then maybe Joe Biden would stay at the White House. Actually, that might not be -- Abbott, if you're listening, go do it.

Tucker is up next. Always remember, I'm Watters, and this is my world.
